National Computer Forensics Institute's Computer Forensics

The course will be offered February 23-28, 2013 at the NCFI in Hoover, Alabama. Travel to the NCFI will be on the Sunday before the first day of class, returning home on Friday. All course fees, airfare (or mileage), hotel, and per diem are covered for the participants by the federal government.

The NCFI is a partnership between The National Judicial College, the United States Secret Service, the Department of Homeland Security and the Alabama District Attorney's Association to train state and local law enforcement, judges and prosecutors in computer forensics and digital evidence. If selected, you will be attending this course with twenty-three other judges from all over the United States. Computer Forensics in Court for Judges is a course that provides hands-on experience with computer and networking technology to allow judges to obtain knowledge and insight into presiding over criminal cases involving digital evidence. The course combines instructor led discussions and practical exercises to teach methodologies and techniques used by investigators, as well as instruction of digital evidence legal issues. After completing this course, students will:

- Recite the significance of how data is stored on computers
- Differentiate between popular operating systems
- Describe the role that the Internet and networks play in computer crimes
- Summarize the entire forensic process performed by investigators
- Identify legal obstacles present in computer crimes

There are no prerequisites, as the course is not designed for individuals with extensive computer technology backgrounds. To apply, please return the provided application by faxing to 205-989-5305).

The deadline for submission of application is November 1, 2013
You will receive notice back via e-mail once selections are made letting you know if you have been selected to attend. This class is limited to 24 students. More information can be found on the NCFI website at www.ncfi.usss.gov. Questions regarding this course can be directed to Barry Page, NCFI Deputy Director(barry.page@alabamada.gov), Brooke Grigsby (brooke.grigsby@alabamada.gov) 205-989-5300.
